Canadian Maple Syrup - 答题回顾

用时 28 分 42 秒 正确 8 错误 2

Part 4

Questions 31-40

Section four. You will hear a lecture on a very popular Canadian food product called maple syrup.

First, you have some time to look at questions thirty-one to forty on page seven.

Now listen carefully and answer questions thirty-one to forty.

Maple syrup can be described as very sweet. Canadians pour it generously over things like pancakes for breakfast. The syrup is produced from the maple tree, and it actually comes from the tree's sap, which is the watery substance that comes out of the trunk of the tree when this is cut. In order for enough sap to be produced, very special climate conditions are needed.

leaving it outside at night and then removing the layer of ice on top.

Uses

First Nations people drank the fresh sap to give them energy medicine

European settlers put the syrup in various types of medicines

They also used it for drinks and for candy.

Its use for making sugar declined after 1880, when the tax on Caribbean sugar was removed.

Threats

Natural:

Harvests may be affected by storms and destructive insects

Climate change may also affect sap production.

GPS tracking will not work in the ocean

In isolated regions, some animals are tracked by helicopter (e.g. the polar bear).

Some animals are identified by markings (e.g. the dolphin is identified by its scars).

Challenges of tracking sea lions

Perth study: the sea lions lost their tags. They rubbed against rocks to remove them.

Californian researchers used paints to identify sea lions. (This was unreliable due to regular loss of fur.)

Our study

Aims:

i) to find out if sea lions' whiskers can be used to identify them

ii) to create a diagram to use as a guide
